alone. Discovery Kids hints that the Temple Mission is "daring." He'll have to be very, very good to beat the odds. Keep in mind that Yellow Team (Monroe and Bryanah) were given the Samahdi in the December 18th episode. They cannot win the Temple Mission.

As it turned out, Brown Team's Vanetta seriously cut her leg on a piece of bamboo. She was rushed to a hospital where her leg was stitched up. Vanetta was out of the game. As J. D. told the players, he gave Tom an option: He could drop out or he could go it alone. Reflecting the Perseverance Pyramid piece that J. D. gave the Brown Team when they entered the competition, Tom chose to play the Temple Mission without his partner.

Yellow Team sits out the game. It's possible they won't be chosen to go to the Temple of Fate, but considering their unpopularity with the others, they probably will (and did).

In Balance Ball, the team that gets three balls into the basket wins. Tom gallantly makes one, but misses his next attempt and is out of the game. Gray and Purple tie at two each, then Purple gets the third one in. Sarah and Reece get to choose the two teams whose fates were to be decided that night.

Back at the huts, everyone is negotiating. The tension between Nicole and Demian continues. When he hears her calling for him, she tells the others that Nicole's hollering reminds him of his mother calling him for chores. Finally, the moment has come when Purple makes their selection. Yellow and Brown will head to the Temple. They say their good-byes. Monroe, tired of being targeted by the others, leaves a "gift" in the other guys' beds. If he's gone that night, they'll have something to remember him by; if he's back, he'll have a good laugh.

In a confessional, Bryanah says that being Monroe's partner opened her eyes to being honest, open and true to everyone. Tom sends his partner a message, "Vanetta - for you girl! You stuck with it and so will I."

At the Temple of Fate, J. D. explains they have to choose an element. The team that chooses the dominant one wins the round. It's a best out of three contest. In the first round, Yellow chooses fire; Brown chooses wood. Fire burns wood, so Yellow wins. In the second round, Yellow chooses wood; Brown chooses water. Wood floats on water, so Yellow wins again. After a valiant effort, Brown heads home. Yellow goes back to the

Other upcoming episodes and recaps...

Great news for Endurance fans! This year, there will be more episodes. Not one or two more, but eight for a total of 21 fresh episodes for 2004 - 2005.

The competition is set in Hawaii. Paradise, right? Not when it rains ... and it rained a lot during the show! Hot and sticky with lots of jungle creatures and bugs may add to the excitement as teens try to win the title of Endurance Hawaii Champion.

We've updated our 2003 interview with J. D. Roth. In it, he talks about the age restrictions, letting kids from other countries on the show, and upcoming events.

We also have interviews with Monroe (Yellow) and Sarah (Purple) for you.

The season began on September 4th with a two-part casting special. The casting director and his crew had to review thousands of tapes to find forty audition semi-finalists. It was interesting to see what the hopefuls did to draw the producers' attention to themselves. Some did just plain bizarre things that didn't go over well. Others showed their devious side. The 40 chosen each included what they do that makes them unique and strong enough physically and emotionally to make it through the grueling challenges. Some had fun pretending to play the game. Others cheered on their favorite Endurance team.

But, the producers were only half-way there. Out of the 40 finalists, 20 needed to be chosen for the trip to Hawaii. Tapes were reviewed and discussed as casting and producers tried to determine the teens who would make the most awesome teams yet. When the final 20 were selected, phone calls were made. J. D. was taken with how excited the first ten were and decided to hit the road to tell the rest in person! Both the kids and J.D.'s reactions were priceless. Season Recaps.

This year's grand prize is an exotic vacation on Galapagos Island, 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador. Sounds oh so cool.

Almost every episode presents the teams with either a new "Endurance Mission" or "Temple Mission."

The ultimate power goes to the winner of the Temple Mission for they send two teams to the "Temple of Fate." Of those two teams, only one returns, with vengeance on the team members' minds. However, the team that wins the Endurance Mission gets pieces of the Endurance Pyramid. The one that wins all 12 first becomes the Endurance champion.

Pyramid Pieces

- Courage. J. D.'s challenges and missions test Endurance players in ways they've never been tested before. They must be brave enough to follow through to the best of their abilities.
- Trust. Both trusting their partners and themselves is necessary to overcome insecurities when facing new situations.
- Commitment. Devotion to the task and trying every way possible to complete it, no matter what occurs.
- Discipline. Completing the tasks are essential to winning.
- Heart. Players have to get along with others and have compassion and understanding of what the others are going through.
- Knowledge. Combining experience with the information at hand allows teams to position themselves for success.
- Leadership. Taking charge of the situation and making the decisions of how the team will play to win challenges.
- Ingenuity. Teams must use creative problem-solving skills to succeed in the challenges.
- Luck. Sometime's it's just a matter of being prepared to see the opportunities given to the teams.
- Strength. Physically training not only produces body strength; it also strengthens the mind as the fit learn how to overcome mental blocks.
- Perseverance. Not giving up until eliminated. You can lose a few times, and still come out the winner.
- Teamwork. Putting aside their personal ambitions for team goals is an important attribute to success in life.

The Pyramid Pieces were assigned to each team according to the characteristics J. D. believes they need to endure to the end.

Commitment - Blue Team.
 Trust - Red Team.
 Knowledge - Gray Team.
 Leadership - Orange Team.
